Kaffee Klatsch A Success Despite 38 Degrees

By Chuck Hennings

Gerry and Cheryl Catha

Saturday, Jan. 17th – the thermometer read 38 degrees and didn't look good for a big turnout for our first Kaffee Klatsch of the year. But as a Club saying goes, "it's not the cars, it's the people". That couldn't have been more true Saturday Jan. 17th when I awoke to 38 degrees and thought about how few cars might attend that morning's Kaffee Klatsch. Not to worry!

By the time I returned from Publix with the doughnuts to the meet site, the wife had already received a call wanting to know where I was! That person will remain nameless but he showed up in a lovely '06 Carrera S just in from Atlanta. Not the GT3 he wanted, but a very nice car. Forty plus cars followed and everyone enjoyed a wonderful morning in the warming sun chatting about our favorite marque while sipping Starbucks and some munching on the doughnuts. Thank you all for coming out and belaying my fears. Ron & Marie Zitza, Mark Peebles, Greg Barrows, and Gary Meredith were some of the Club regulars in attendance as well as Luis Rivera from the OrlandoAutomotiveClub who hosts the Cars and Café events every month in Lake Mary (see calendar).

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

What a great turnout for our first event, the Jan. 17th Kaffee Klatsch. There's another scheduled March 28th in Ocoee and details will be published/emailed soon.

Our next major event is the Driver's Ed at Roebing Road in February followed by the rebirth of the Chili Bake Off at the Porsche dealership Feb. 28th (see flyer on page 4). I'm hunting up a recipe to bring.

Some exciting news from webmaster Brian Remington. Little did I realize, after asking him to look at a less costly and more user-friendly site for us, that he would research other sites in agonizing detail and develop us a terrific new website that will cost us zero to maintain! Brian will review the new site at the next meeting Feb 2nd so be sure to be there. It has some neat features and is based on software provided by PCA National.

Planning continues for the Sunrise to Sunset Rally scheduled for April 25, 26 and has just kicked off for the Memorial Day weekend's Zonefest. More details are coming soon. Both events were huge successes last year.

Despite the struggling economy and pain we're all feeling (my 401k is now a 201k) I hope to continue to schedule events that are not only fun but lower in cost. Stay tuned.

Feb 20 – 22 @ Roebeling Road

Our first Driver's Education event for 2009 is just 3 weeks away. If you haven't already registered for Instructor School on Fri., Feb 20th, what are you waiting for? Take advantage of these lower fuel prices while they last. After all, what's the fun in owning a sports car if you don't stretch its legs once in a while? The Blue and Green groups for Sat/Sun are filled so you'll have to go on the waiting list, but signup. There's always cancellations. Registration is at ClubRegistration.net.

We've got a fresh run group schedule for the weekend that includes earlier start & end times on Sunday. And as always, non-drivers can participate in the weekend's activities. If you need additional information, take a look at the DE section of the club website or feel free to shoot me an email. This event is publicized nationally in the Panorama and the folks up north love to get an early start to the DE season. So don't miss out on this limited space event. It always sells out so get registered now.

One Lap of America (Article # 7) - by Mark Peebles

We left on this adventure on Saturday, some 2053 miles ago. It is now Tuesday evening and we are headed on the longest leg of the race, 794 miles. Either the mind was going numb at this point or it was a very uneventful leg. I remember nothing but passing the Honda factory just before dark. You remember in the last installment that the Honda factory team had lost their tranny and were stopping at the factory to get a new one. Oh to have factory sponsorship!

We were driving all night to get to Kershaw, Carolina Motor Sports Park. For those not familiar with CMSP, it is a lot like Roebling. It is a club course with minimal shelter and a rather crude layout. It was my turn to drive. I actually got to the track a little early and decided to briskly walk the track. There had never been enough time to walk any of the others. I headed off at a half run. I had only 15 minutes and a map in my hand.

My observations were a lot of late apexes. As I noted the last right turn on to the finish straight I asked the driver next to me if he had ever been here. The answer was just what I wanted to hear. He said many times and introduced himself as the chief driving instructor for the BMW performance center. WOW! I had struck gold. You now can guess my next question. DO YOU HAVE ANY ADVICE! "Why yes I do", he smiled. He went on to point out that every corner on the course was marked with white plastic sticks around the inside of each turn. I acknowledged this observation and waited for more. He then told me that the second to last stick on every corner was the apex. HOT DOG. I now had an advantage over the others. If the brakes would hold out, this event could bring us up in the standings.

You make a lot of friends on this adventure and when I got back to the paddock there were two of my new Porsche friends hanging around drinking liquid courage, coffee. Instead of keeping this secret to myself, I blurted out that I had discovered the holy grail of CMSP, the markings of the apex for every corner on the track. So much for an advantage.

It was my turn to launch for my laps of CMSP. I was pumped. Hammer down and off I went. I cannot tell you how confident I felt, knowing where every apex was hiding. Corner after corner, the confidence built. All the corners were melting away behind me. I built up more and more speed. There was a huge smile on my face. The only obstacle in my way was a long straight with a kink, about three quarters of the way down. Everyone said you could take it flat-out. Keep that long thin pedal on the right all the way to the floor and do not lift. Sounds easy to do. Well, there was only one problem to address with this idea. My brain and my right foot seem to have different ideas of how to keep the pedal to the metal. Every time I came up on this kink, my foot would lift off the gas. My mind was saying go for it but the foot said no way. This went on lap after lap. It came down to the last lap, do it now or fall further down the standings. The mind said here we go! Up over the rise and on to the straight. The kink is coming up fast and I have convinced myself that I can do this!

Just as I start to input some steering to the kink, my foot lifts off the gas. It is off for what seems like a 100 feet before I can get the mind to overrule the foot again. My great time is now in peril. Darn!!! Now I have been so focused on the straight that I had dismissed the notion that I would lose my brakes like all the other times that week. You guessed it. I made the left after the straight and hit the brakes hard for a slow 180 degree turn to the right when bam, NO BRAKES. I overshot the turn but kept it on the grass so as to fight my way back on the course. I have to finish or I get no points for the pretty good run I had. Hand over hand and both feet working the pedals, I got it back on course and over the finish line. For what started out as a walk in the park turned out to be quite a pucker factor in the end.

We spent the rest of the morning at the hardware store buying hose and clamps to rig up brake cooling to the front brakes. Not bad looking if I say so myself. I headed out for the afternoon session with even more confidence. I had brakes and knew the apexes. I gave up on trying to take the kink flat out. The foot ruled.

Would you believe, I made it all through the session and lost the brakes just as I started across the finish line?

After two races, we were not done yet. We packed up in the early afternoon and headed to the BMW Performance center, 154 miles north for an autocross.

When will the fun end!!!
